Plugin	Name	Availability	Full Support	Status
Wiki-Admin	Wiki-Admin	Full Support	Full Support	Stable

LET'S TALK - BUILDING A MODULAR PHP FRAMEWORK FROM SCRATCH

Author(s): Louis Ouellet

Have you ever worked with popular PHP frameworks like CakePHP or Symfony and thought, "I wonder how these v tremendous time-savers, but they are truly powerful only when you know them inside and out. Developing your ow learning exercise, giving you deeper insight into best practices, modularity, and maintainability.

In this article, I share how I've started building my own PHP framework from the ground up. This includes construct configuration, setting up modules, creating a logging system, and finally wrapping requests into a tidy Request clas you'll see the value of a well-structured, modular approach that can be extended with custom modules as needed.
